

AN EQUAL CHANCE

The Profound Craving of Modern Times—Favoritism Is Declared on All Sides—Some Questions Considered—An Illustration of an Equal Chance Given—The Results.

By W. T. Williams

This is the profound craving of modern times. It is the craving of the soul, and we hear it on every hand. It is hard for us to turn in any direction without hearing some thing concerning it, for the insatiable hosts have been voraciously charmed by it. They have felt intensely the eloquence of this proposition. Their bosoms have been heaved by it, and they are willing to run all sorts of hazards in order to secure the prize. Surely the multitudes yearn more and more for an equal chance in the world, and that, as we think, because they believe vehemently that they are entitled to it. They have gone very far already along this line, inasmuch that their sacrifice has been immense and their sufferings indescribable. Never have the children of men fought so patiently, eagerly and bravely for anything as they have done for this. It is to them a pearl of very great preciousness.

Favoritism is declared on all sides, as it should be. It is true that it has played a large part in our history, and perhaps, we are justified in saying that it is not dead yet. It is not easily killed, because it is by nature so shameless that it crawls within the folds of the most sacred precincts. Every channel has been contaminated by it, and it is guilty of every crime in the catalog. Nevertheless, the fact that it is looked upon today with such scorching derision, is sufficient to prove its unfairness, and it might signify too that its wings, although strong, have been cropped. It has merited the blow of death more than once, and, unless we have been seen irrational by what we have seen and heard, it ought to be slain without delay in every heart. For the sake of those things which must not be allowed to develop within us. Every man is entitled to a fair chance, and a little besides. How beautiful the character that has become gentle enough to consider the children of men from the point of view of the Nazarene! Such a character is more valuable to the community in which he resides than army of ten thousand times ten thousand. Let us hail the man whenever he is seen. He is worthy of our most sincere admiration.

Taking for granted now that an equal chance is given to every one, will this make us all alike in circumstances? This question is pointed, that it strikes the quick of the issue; and before it can be answered, there are some things which must be taken into consideration. Is it right to say that all people are equal in capacity? Is it correct to think that all minds are on an equal footing? Is it accurate to believe that all men are equal in strength? Unless these questions can be answered in the affirmative, an equal chance can never abolish the unevenness of life, which is entirely too evident even in these enlightened days of ours. Our capacity for this or that is not to be regarded as a negligible feature in this matter, for it is, whether we accept it or not, the very quality on which the emphasis must be placed. Some men are faster than others. Some men are stronger than their fellows. Some men are better managers than their neighbors. Human life is not all level ground. It has hills, mountains, deep and shallow valleys in just the same as one's country. There are elevations and depressions in it. Our endowments are not all of the same size, and these variations are phases too important to set aside. They must be understood before we can hope to appreciate this issue which seems so divinely fair.

In order to demonstrate conclusively what we have in mind, we will refer to that illustrious short-story, known as "The Parable of the Pound." The author of it wanted to correct an erroneous conception which he knew was working havoc within the small circle of his nearest friends. A certain nobleman went into a far country, to receive for himself a kingdom, and to return. And he called ten servants of his, and gave them ten pounds, and said unto them, Trade ye herewith till I come. These servants received from the hands of the nobleman an equal chance. They had from him a pound apiece, and he started on his journey. Nothing could be fairer than this.

But, after he had returned, the day of reckoning dawned; and it was found that the first man by wise endeavor had multiplied his original ability by ten. This was certainly an accomplishment worthy of the name and he was rewarded accordingly. "Well done, thou good servant; because thou wast faithful in a very little, have thou authority over ten cities." The second man appeared with his report. He also had been faithful in his stewardship, and upon finding that he had multiplied his original gift by five, he heard of the reward of the nobleman: "Be thou over five cities." He received in accordance with his ability to produce. Even though his increase was only five as much as the increase of his fellow worker, it was not slighted in any manner. It was duly recognized.

The third man came and said: "I feared thee because thou art an austere man; thou takest up that which thou layest down, and repeat that which thou didst not sow. Here I have laid up in a napkin." Instead of being industrious in season, he found fault with his opportunity. The nobleman had dealt cruelly with him. He had received the same as the others, but he had failed to improve it as time went on. Have we not here a plain instance of a man devoid of every quality which makes possible the "ventures of faith?" Have we not in this small bit of fiction a portrayal of the person who has burdened society from the beginning of this beautiful world? Is it not true that a large part of our vexation has been caused by his kind? So far as we can see he was not a rebellious citizen. He was coldly negative rather than willfully belligerent. He was too narrow to grow. He was too timid to be of any help to any one, even himself. He was afraid to hurt the feelings of his fellows, and then he did nothing at all. He was an undesirable neighbor. His life was buried in fruitless inaction, allowing the success of others to stir him unwearily, and since there he was in the presence of the fair nobleman without anything to show for his life. He had spent his life in vain. His equal chance had been destroyed. This is an everlasting peril.

To be efficient in our various callings is an attainment for which we ought to strive unwearily, and since we believe that this is the deep desire of the major part of mankind, we will continue to make earnest efforts to reach the mark. At this time the words of Saint Paul push themselves irresistibly upon us: "Let us not abate our courage in doing what is right; for in doing what is right we shall reap a reward, if we faint not. So then as we have opportunity, let us labor for the good of all, and especially of those who belong to the household of faith."

JOHN MACK SAFE

John Mack Who Escaped From Fulton County Jail December 8th, Plunges Into Hands of Officers Within Ten Days, And Lands in Ohio Penitentiary To Begin Sentence, On Monday December 21st.

Brief indeed was the period of John Mack's freedom from the fetters of the law. Mack was found guilty of safe breaking and sentenced to the Ohio Penitentiary for a term of one to two years. He was released on parole on December 8th, but within ten days he was back in the Ohio Penitentiary. Mack was found by officers of the Ohio Penitentiary on December 21st, and was sentenced to a term of one to two years. Mack was found by officers of the Ohio Penitentiary on December 21st, and was sentenced to a term of one to two years.

On Thursday evening three men entered a jewelry store in Lima, Ohio, held up the clerk in charge, rifled the store and took $25.00 in cash from one of them, then made a clean getaway. Later on Thursday night three men turned up in the W. & L. E. R. yards at Lima and a brakeman and conductor of that road who were suspicious of the men permitted them to leave. The three men were taken to the freight train southeast from Lima, having previously wired to officers who met the train at St. Marys, took the three men in custody and returned with them to Lima where a detective recognized John Mack as one of the three robbers. The men were bound over to the grand jury of Allen county on charges of highway robbery. Sheriff McQuillin was notified of Mack's capture and on Sunday evening, accompanied by F. R. Harper and Charles Bruning who were appointed by the court at the time Mack was sentenced to assist in escorting him to the Penitentiary, he went to Lima, where Mack was delivered into his custody and on Monday Mack was landed safe within the walls of the Ohio Penitentiary and one more chapter in his life history was closed. Mack is about 27 years of age and even if he should be held for the full term of 20 years he would be a comparatively young man at the time of his release, and if during the time spent in the penitentiary his attitude toward law and society in general might be so changed that he should determine to live a law abiding life and enter some useful occupation he might still become a useful citizen. While in Lima Sheriff McQuillin recognized one of the two men who were with Mack in the Lima robbery, one of the four who were charged with being implicated in the blowing of the safe at Bralley in October; it is quite likely that this man may be brought to trial here in Fulton county as we understand he is under indictment for this offense in this county.

SHORT WINTER DAIRY COURSE. Many young men in Ohio will find the Winter Course in Dairying from January 4 to 30 at the College of Agriculture just what they are looking for. This course is open to any young man who is at least 16 years of age, but the course will be closed to the course a student should have had some practical experience in the production and the handling of milk. The dairy department has experienced difficulty in securing men qualified to supervise the work in connection with the Advanced Registry and the Cow Testing Associations. This course will prepare men for work and a very few weeks of work after taking the course will enable many of the students to pay all expenses connected with it. The course will include instruction in increasing a man's earning capacity, enable him to enjoy a broad view of all kinds of dairy work.

FREE SCHOLARSHIP

Boy Winners of Corn Contests in Each County Will Receive Scholarship in Agricultural College O. S. U. Wesley Stowell of Fayette Wins Scholarship This Year.

The following letter from A. P. Sandles President of the Agricultural Commission of Ohio will be of interest to the boys who are undertaking to show that more and better corn can be raised in Ohio.

As a lasting reward to winners in Boy's Corn Growing Contests, a Free Scholarship, good for Three Year Short Course, at Agricultural College, Ohio State University, will be awarded by the Agricultural Commission to the boy who grows the most shelled corn on one acre in each county, each year, according to rules of Junior Contests.

Heretofore County Fair Boards awarded these scholarships, good for two years. Trustees of the Agricultural College, Ohio State University, will be awarded by the Agricultural Commission to the boy who grows the most shelled corn on one acre in each county, each year, according to rules of Junior Contests.

The University Trustees decided to have boys win this honor by some effort of their own. Dean Price, head of the Agricultural College, suggested that the prize go to the winners in the Junior Contest. This plan was adopted by both the Trustees and Agricultural Commission.

Boys who win Free Scholarships now have the satisfaction of knowing that by their own effort, and not the influence of others, the prize will be theirs. The Trustees require boys to be at least 17 years old when middle of this course, which begins middle of October each year.

This plan of awarding Free Scholarships will add interest to Ohio Junior Contest work. This makes a cash value of $5,280 in prizes each year for 88 Scholarship worthy $60 each. This year 76 boys were given this honor. At the end of three years each county may have three boys in this Short Course.

Institute and Grange officers should urge boys to enter these contests. No boy will be awarded more than one scholarship. Free trips should also be provided. Every encouragement possible should be given to keep boys in the country, until they have at least arrived at the age of accountability. Attention should be given to these matters at once.

Respectfully,
A. P. SANDLES.

Boys must be at least 17 years old by October 15th, 1915 in order to enter the College under the award of scholarships for the present year.

Wesley Stowell of Fayette gets this year's scholarship for Fulton county, having raised 123.7 bushels of shelled corn on one acre of ground; this gives him a Free Scholarship for the three year course in the College of Agriculture, certainly worth working for. What Boy will get the scholarship next year?

Grand Rapids, Mich.—Mr. and Mrs. Horace Barnaby recently celebrated their golden wedding. The affair was notably inasmuch as the present Mrs. Barnaby is the fourth wife of Mr. Barnaby. His three former wives all died shortly after they were married.

Mr. Barnaby is 92 years old. Kaliapell, Mont.—When Mrs. Angeline Johnson learned that her "husband" Charles C. Johnson, with whom she had been living for over 15 years, had never been divorced from his first wife, she had her marriage annulled.

Johnson thereupon brought suit against her for wages at the rate of $40 a month for the whole time they had lived together. He lost.

Junction City, Kan.—That a piano can yield up other things than music was discovered by Chief of Police Pease in a raid on a house, the occupants of which had been suspected of selling liquor. A careful search revealed no incriminating evidence and the officers were about ready to believe they had been working on a false trail when Chief Pease accidentally struck several of the piano keys. There was no response in the way of sound, so he lifted the lid and found that the original contents of the instrument had been removed and replaced with a collection of bottled goods. Seveneen bottles of whiskey and a half barrel of bottled beer were found in the piano.

SAFETY FIRST.

The following circular issued by the New York Central Lines, has been adopted by the Commandant of the U. S. Navy Yard at Charleston, S. C., and a copy has been posted on each bulletin board of each ship also furnished to the commanding officer of each vessel undergoing repairs at the station:

Many shopmen are injured by the careless handling of material, allowing things to fall on one another or themselves. Don't try to handle heavy material without sufficient help and take time to handle it safely.

Many are injured falling over material left lying in walk-ways or by stepping on nails sticking up in plank. Every employee should make it his duty to keep walk ways cleared of such material.

Many are injured by pieces of steel breaking off tools that have "buried" or "mushroomed" heads. Tools should never be used when in this condition. Foremen and employees should see that all tools are properly dressed and in good condition.

Never use a machine that should be guarded without the guard in its proper place. Failure in this regard may cost you a limb or your life.

When engaged in chipping, riveting or grinding, always wear goggles to protect your eyes from injury. Goggles will be furnished each man engaged in such work free of charge by the Company. (These appliances are likewise furnished by the Government.)

Do your work the right way—do it the safe way. You owe it to your families to avoid getting hurt. Think also of your fellow workman and his family and avoid hurting him.

A FRIDAY IN COURT
Transgressors Find Their Way Hard. Prisoner Released From Jail in Fulton County Taken Into Custody By Lorain County Sheriff. New Judge and Prosecutor, January 4th, 1915.

Last Friday was a busy day in Common Pleas court and not fortunate for those who came before the Court on Criminal charges except in one case, that of the State of Ohio vs Simon Gray on the charge of rape. The jury in this case found the defendant guilty. A motion for a new trial in this case was filed, Monday, Dec. 21st. Edward E. Fisk pled guilty to a charge of neglect to provide for child on Thursday of last week and on Friday Judge Scott gave him an indeterminate sentence of from one to three years at hard labor in the Ohio Penitentiary and appointed clerk J. King as trustee to disburse money coming from the State for the support of the child. Another event on Friday was the release on bond of $2000, his own recognizance, of J. H. Merdick, alias C. Rogers who had been indicted for complicity in blowing safe at Bralley. Rogers was given his freedom by the Fulton county court only to be immediately arrested by the Sheriff of Lorain county who was in waiting for him and taken to Elyria to face an indictment for breaking into a box car and taking therefrom merchandise to the value of about $300. It certainly was a hard Friday for the transgressors and it will be the last Friday under Judge Scott as the regular Judge of this court. For on Monday January 4th Judge elect Fred H. Wolf will assume the duties of judge of this court and Prosecutor elect Chas. T. Stahl will assume the duties as prosecuting attorney of the county in place of Attorney J. B. Templeton who is finishing his second term in that office.

Bridge Scott has approved the bond filed by Mr. Stahl and following the provisions of law has allowed $100.00 per week for clerk hire in Mr. Stahl's office and $120.00 per year for office rent payable out of the treasury of the county.

CHRISTMAS CAROLS.
It was a happy thought of some person to have Christmas Carols sung up and down the streets and in the homes of many. A childless mother sat alone by her window in an unlighted room that she might better enjoy the beauties outside. The ground was covered with beautifully white snow, the air clear and the stars and crescent moon beamed kindly light. Suddenly the strains of "Holy Night" and "Peace on Earth Good Will to Men" were heard at her very door. It was the Christmas Carolers and she fervently exclaimed, May God Bless the Children of this Land and every Land. Love and joy are following in your wake and will react upon your precious lives.

RECEPTION TO MEMBERS.
Rev. and Mrs. O. P. Hoffman and daughter, Miss Lois gave a reception to the membership of the Methodist church at the parsonage Friday afternoon. Beginning at 1 o'clock fifteen hours were assigned to various groups of the membership and the evening was devoted to the young people of the church. Ladies of the church assisted Rev. and Mrs. Hoffman in receiving.

This reception served the double purpose of giving the entire membership the opportunity of meeting their "fellow workers" at the same time permitting them to inspect the parsonage which has recently been extensively repaired.

THE Economy Exerciser and Feeder

Chickens get the grain by scratching which gives them exercise in the natural way, and the grain distributor has very accurate adjustment, so that you can make them work just as long and just as hard as you wish for their feed. The Economy Exerciser and Feeder is all metal and perfectly weather proof, rat proof and sparrow proof. It is equally good for old and young chickens and used either with litter or on the bare ground or floor.

Chickens can operate it as soon as they are large enough to eat wheat or cracked corn, and fowls of any age soon learn that scratching around the chains brings down the "eats."
